RACING AUTOS LEAP INTO RIVER; 4 HURT

ONE DRIVER MAY DIE AS RESULT OF TWO WRECKS ON CUP COURSE.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Watching "round the Brookline circuit" at terrific speed today in preparation for the annual cup race Friday, two big racing autos leaped from the road near John D. Rockefeller's estate and plunged over the fence into the Shaw river.

As the result of the machine's jump the two auto drivers and two mechanics were badly hurt. One of them may die.

Charles Robertson, brother of George Robertson, driving a "Panhard" car, was going at a terrific speed when he approached the Eastern bridge. The auto skidded and upset. J. L. Wolf, driving a Matthews car, jumped the stone bridge over the Shaw river and the two mechanics and the auto plunged into the water.

Robertson, who has a record of a mile a minute, was alone in his Panhard car, and that too, the accident happened in the morning. There had been two other accidents on the Brookline circuit.

Campbell and Ralph Palmer were following behind him. The latter was first across the bridge. When Campbell and Palmer reached the bridge, Robertson was lying unconscious beside the parapet of the bridge, with the auto overturned and badly wrecked. Apparently he had dashed into the water.

Record Run to Hospital.

Campbell and Palmer lifted Robertson, still unconscious, into their car, and then started on a record run for the Eastern hospital.

Robertson was revived there, but he was still too dazed to be able to tell how the accident happened. He is in a serious condition.

J. L. Wolf, who was entered for Friday's race as the driver of the Matthews car, was not later for his practice spin in a Matthews car with two mechanics, Charles Matthews and James Wood. All three live at the Brookline estate.

Wolf was particularly bad ship as the Matthews car was badly wrecked. The stone bridge crosses the Shaw river at this point and the course of the race is over it.

Car Leaps Into River.

Wolf was driving at a good pace and tried to take the sharp turn in the road at the bridge without slackening speed. The machine hit the bridge and the impact was so great that the car leaped over the bridge into the river below, carrying all three men with it.

Palmer, driving a Kingston car, was behind Wolf, and when Allen reached the bridge, he saw the Matthews car. The three men up the river bank and got them in the Kingston car. The Matthews car was a total wreck.

Allen pushed the three men to the Eastern hospital. Then he ran into Taylor's car and got Dr. C. J. Matthews. He brought him here to Eastern with medical supplies. Wolf had a broken leg and a concussion of the brain. He is believed to be seriously injured, and it is thought that he will not recover. Wolf was badly bruised and shaken up.

Today's Lesson in The
American's Course for Salespeople

Copyright, 1908, by American Journal Publisher

The most frequent complaint made by customers against clerks is lack of attention.

Attention means not only alertness when a customer approaches but also CLOSE ATTENTION to the customer as long as he or she remains in the vicinity.

Many an extra sale has been made because the clerk remained alert until the last.

For instance:

A lady was purchasing some ribbon. The salesgirl had completed the initial sale and the lady was just about leaving when she chanced to glance at some other ribbon which was displayed upon the counter. It was only a glance, yet it showed intention back of it which the clerk was quick to see.

"A very pretty ribbon, madam, and we have it in a number of other shades."

The lady immediately thought of what she wanted the ribbon for and another sale was concluded.

A simple thing and mere a very big sale, for the second purchase amounted to less than half a dollar; but the clerk who was alert enough to get this sale will get many others, and many other larger ones.

Other clerks would perhaps have watched idly while the customer glanced at the ribbon and then walked away. THE ATTENTIVE CLERK IS THE VALUABLE ONE.

Next Lesson on Thursday's American.

Put out these "lessons." Every Sunday we print a review and self-examination. A good plan is to clip the lessons and reviews out and paste them in a scrapbook. You will then have a manual on salesmanship that you could not buy for a good many dollars. It may be worth hundreds to you in increased salary.

U. S. MACHINE GUN RESOLUTIONS

GALLINGER RULES REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION; HEADS DELEGATION.

Special to the Boston American.

CORCORD, N. H. April 21.—The presidential aspirations of Secretary of War William H. Taft received the greatest boost of the year, so far as the Eastern States are concerned, this afternoon, when the Republicans of New Hampshire voted to send their four delegates to the National Republican convention absolutely unopposed, and equipped, and by a voting vote of 100 to 25 defeated a resolution which would have sent them delegates to the National convention instructed to vote for Secretary Taft.

It was a complete triumph for the Gallinger and the machine over the Hollister machine, which had been expected to be defeated by the Taft machine. The Taft machine, however, was not expected to be defeated by the Gallinger machine, which was expected to be defeated by the Taft machine.

Witnesses secured by the Finance Commission of the alleged violation of the Sherman antitrust law by French and the persons included in the so-called "Boson agreement" in the structural trade, was turned over to United States District Attorney A. P. French by the commission.

French said he had evidence in the United States Court.

SECRET PLANS FOR BURIAL OF WALLACE HAM

Confessed Embezzler of Trust Funds Succumbed to Combination of Diseases.

PASSED AWAY ON SUNDAY

Arrangements are being made in secret today for the burial of Wallace H. Ham, convicted and confessed embezzler of the American Surety Company, of which he was manager, and of church treasuries, who died in the State Prison on Sunday.

Ham was serving a sentence of from fifteen to twenty years, and received the prison term June 1st.

Although he had been in a decline for some time, he had been in the hospital for some time, and had been in the hospital for some time.

He died on Sunday morning, and his body was taken to the prison hospital.

His friends had told him that after he had passed away, they would make an effort to secure his remains.

He would not be buried in the prison, but in a private funeral home.

His body was taken to the prison hospital, and he died on Sunday morning.

ARSON SUSPECT HELD IN $1,000

Charged with arson in setting fire to the house of his brother-in-law, Thomas Sherwood, at No. 48 Seventh street, Cambridge, a week ago last Sunday night, Manuel Oliver, thirty years old and Canadian, was held in $1,000 bail for the trial.

Oliver, who was in the collar of the law on the night of the fire, and who was charged with arson, but denies that he tried to burn the place.

If You Are In Good Form, Stay That Way

Men, and Especially Women, Who Are Plump Are Most Liable to Get Too Fat

Most women taking pride in being plump are a little over-weighed in weight, which means that they are cultivating what is bound to result in a serious method of life. They are eating too much, and it will surely come, to rob the system of its most wonderful things that have been given to man.

There never was a beautiful fat woman, in the sense of a serious method of life. They are eating too much, and it will surely come, to rob the system of its most wonderful things that have been given to man.

Lewis Wins in Fourth Round

HEAVYWEIGHT BOXING

History and legend, but game to the core, Henry Meloy went down to defeat at the hands of Harry Lewis, the clever Quaker lad, in the fourth round of the scheduled bout at the Armory A. A. in the most electrifying bout the members have witnessed for a long time.

Meloy had no chance with the versatile handling Lewis, who was in the tatter in the first round, when he made the Charlestown boy take the full count and again in the third, but he was unable to finish the courageous Quaker fighter in the fourth round.

It was Meloy's own style of boxing which made it easy for Lewis to reach him, and thereby make a decisive ending in his favor. The Meloy man made every punch he lay at the outset and was unable to connect with the vital part of Meloy's torso.

Meloy, true to his reputation for gameness, took the battering on his jaw, head and chest, but he was not discouraged. He was in the most brilliant form of his life in the fourth round.

There was no change in Lewis' tactics from the moment the first gong rang, and Lewis was in the most brilliant form of his life in the fourth round. He was in the most brilliant form of his life in the fourth round.

Meloy down for Count. In the first round, when Lewis put Meloy down for the full count, he could not follow up the advantage gained, as Henry laid a savage kick left to him which was curiously.

Usually It Is the Selfish, Blind Egotism of the One Most at Fault That Drives the Marital Ship Upon Them

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Is It, Like So Many Others, Drifting
Around Just Outside the Harbor, or Is It GOING SOMEWHERE?
Copyright, 1908, by American Journal Examiner

Suppose you stopped the flying machine and questioned the skippers of these strange ships, saying to them, "What are you doing out here? Where do you come from? Where are you going? What is your direction?"

And suppose they answered:
 "We are going nowhere in particular. We came from that port just behind us, we are going to circle and drift around here for a while; that's all."

You would say to them, "What do you do when you have finished traveling aimlessly?" And you would ask them, "What is that other ship I see going straight ahead, far off on the horizon?"

The answer would be: "We go around in circles, we go backward and forward, or we drift; then we sink down here beneath this ocean. That ship you ask about, with the smoke along the horizon, is run by an odd fellow who has a queer idea that he wants to GET somewhere, and he is going there."

If you saw ships acting in that way, with skippers talking in that way, you would be very much surprised. You would ask yourself why they ever took the trouble to come out of port at all, if they were going nowhere. You would wonder why they did not all follow the man bound off across the water with a purpose. You would think it almost impossible that all these sailors in the ships COULD be contented to go around and around, aimlessly, and then sink down under the water unknown and unheard of.

But WHAT ARE WE ORDINARY HUMAN BEINGS BUT JUST SUCH SHIPS?

Here we are, drifting, all, with few exceptions, bound nowhere in particular. We came from that port behind us, called the cradle. But we have no chart, our compass is not thought of, and some of us haven't brains enough to use a compass, or ambition enough to map out a road.

Destiny forces us out of the cradle. Nature's forces, beyond our control, launched us upon this ocean of life. And here we drift or sail in circles, or go backward and forward. Occasionally one of us, with a definite plan, goes off in one direction, AND GETS SOMEWHERE, AND DOES SOMETHING. But most of us go around and around, and sink out of sight at the end, just about where we began, having gone nowhere and done nothing.

Of all human beings, nine hundred and ninety-nine out of a thousand are drifting. We talk to one another, we stick close together, we have a voyage, and we end up our little sailing expedition practically at the mouth of the harbor whence we started.

Have a plan; do not drift; get away from the drifting vessels; follow the few that strike out a path of their own; GO SOMEWHERE, LAND SOMEWHERE, AND DO SOMETHING. Start TO-DAY and leave the drifting, aimless idlers.

ago a little pamphlet fell into my hands entitled "A Vision

It was the clear seeing of a sensitive mind, or so claimed to be; and among its other prophecies was one which said that "divorce" would increase until it became a menace to the whole nation—the American nation—threatening to destroy its entire social founda-

The divorce itself seems to-day to verify the correctness of the Vision of the Future."

Divorce is at times the only moral cure, unselfish method for two miserable beings to escape the agony of a deliverance from purgatory. But how seldom do we ever hear of a man or woman, after the failure of a marriage as his or her own fault?

Self-Analysis

IN the same address from which the heading of this article was selected, the following observations, relative to this subject, occurred:

Never do we find the petitioner for a divorce claiming the fault as his own — representing himself as unfit to live with the other one. I do not know that there is any law that would provide for a divorce being granted in such a case. The mutual selfishness, or self-seeking, in these matters, between self-seeking, in these matters betrays something of the nature of the transaction.

Yet there have been cases in which one has nobly and voluntarily sacrificed himself for the happiness of the other one or for the seeming good of the children of the union by submitting to, and discussing their troubles together.

Indeed, were each to give an hour alone to such self-analysis in the beginning of unhappiness, there would be no later troubles; for each would discover the flaw in his or her own conduct, and endeavor to rectify it.

or even seeking divorce. In such cases it is as holy an act as refraining from it would be in other cases. Under this head might be placed the duty of non-resistance in all cases where the other one is seeking a divorce.

All action along these lines is embraced in the admonition, "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

THEY entered the "L" train at the North Station, and at Sullivan Square I lost sight of them—a fleeting vision probably never to return. But the picture held my soul spellbound for those few minutes, which were like a benediction at the close of a grim and wearisome day.

They were man and woman, of years seemingly advanced beyond the allotted ted sixty and ten. Of their raiment I noted only that it was of poor quality, and thinned by the wear of many seasons. In the lapel of his coat was the bronze button of the Grand Army of the Republic. She was gloveless, and on one of her lean, worn fingers was a on one of her feet, worn fingers were a fragile band of gold. His large hands bore the marks of hard physical toil, made necessary, I could readily infer, by a poverty that had attended them for years.

But it was their faces that held my soul captive, that touched me with a pathos whose supreme note was joy. For out of those two faces shone a love triumphant, each for the other, where the birds sang of hope at day and the long pathway down the garden to the dusk, with that one star overhead!
